1. I have a clear set of priorities and goals regarding my educational, work, family, and leisure activities.

2. I am aware of and apply effective time management principles, tools, and techniques to organize my life.

3. I have an accurate and detailed picture of how I spend my time during a typical week.

4. I maintain a balance of focus between immediate and urgent tasks and long-term, important ones.

5. I make a daily list of things I want and need to do and organize my activities to complete them efficiently.

6. I plan for and stick to regular times during the week to study for each class.

7. I stay aware of the long-term assignments, projects, and exams in all of my classes and prepare for them before they are due.

8. I anticipate and accommodate for “crunch” times when several classes have overlapping due dates or exams.

9. I schedule regular time for physical activities, fun, and socializing.

10. I am willing and able to say “no” when appropriate in order to stay on schedule and accomplish my most important goals.

For those items above which you responded to with a 1 or a 2, consider trying out new behaviors to see if you can increase your level of success in school and in life.
