Online (Distance Learning) Modes

PCM	Online Courses	PCM students use the Internet and email to complete coursework online. Discussion boards, streaming video, and instructional software may also be incorporated. Students use their own computers or the Computer Labs on campus.
HYD	Hybrid Courses	Hybrid courses combine traditional classroom instruction with computer-based distance education. The majority of the coursework is online, with some classroom or laboratory meetings also scheduled.
ITV	Instructional Television Courses	ITV students watch pre-recorded video telecourse programs locally on cable, or on campus in the ACC Media Centers. Most programs can also be rented for the semester, and some are streamed online.
PRN	Print-Based Courses	PRN students use printed materials such as textbooks and study guides as their primary mode of instruction. Some classes may also include audio or videotapes, email, or online activities.
DIR	Directed Studies Courses	DIR students spend time on location at a local facility, such as a government, health, or social service institution as a major part of their coursework. Classes may also have some meetings on campus.
